

Course Overview

Success and performance in the music room requires more than just good teaching skills and experience, both of which have served teaching professionals well in the past. To succeed in today's challenging environment, teachers require a new set of skills for understanding and positively managing student's behaviour in a music room setting.

These skills require an understanding of how student's behaviour and development are shaped as a reaction to rewards, punishments, stimuli, and reinforcement and how to use these to influence the attitude and behaviour of students to create a positive music room setting.

This 'taster' workshop aims to empower participants with the appreciation of student's behaviour and associated learning styles. The session will provide practical leadership skills in how to successfully manage whole music class teaching, directing ensembles of anything up to 75 members and how to present taster concerts to primary schools audiences of up to 200 pupils.

Course Objectives

At the end of the course, participants should be able to:

- Understand different learning and leadership styles
- Grasp the different factors which may influence student's behaviour and knowledge of how to effectively manage these behaviours
- Appreciate how to successfully plan the classroom
